

Farmers want US-China trade spat to end with 'win-win'

Cheng Guan

April 17, 2018

Some agricultural companies think the current trade disagreement between the US and China is like a marital spat.

According to the data, more than 30 percent of Iowa's soybeans are sent to China and the Hawkeye state is a major hog producer and a potential trade war that includes two of the state's most important products has created angst among those whose livelihoods depend on the agricultural economy.

As we know , there are some issues between the US and China that need to be discussed . However,China is a big market they have spent years buildingup the relation ship. It's necessary for each oher to find a time to talk about the issues .In the end. they need a win-win situation.

图 1: Fig1

图 2: Fig2