

Facebook is responsible for content

Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg says the company is "responsible for the content" on its platform.

That's departure from how internet companies have traditionally viewed themselves — as neutral platforms generally not responsible for what people post and share on their services.

As for my opinions, Facebook, as a super internet company, has the responsibility to undertake moral and legal obligation. Facebook should remove some suspected terrorist propaganda before anyone sees it and should be able to remove other negative content too.
